Maintaining confidentiality for foster children in our ever-changing technical world

Region 1 Foster Parent Caregiver Newsletter

Winter 2010

Submitted by Melissa Fielding

Technology is a wonderful thing for many of us. We love our gadgets, love to get information in an instant, and love to stay connected so easily with our friends and family. Technology for all its advances and useful purposes is of course, not without inherent problems. Whether it is the worry of identity theft or the stealing of credit card numbers by an online hacker, one thing is for certain- our “personal” information doesn’t seem very “personal” anymore. It is astounding the information you can get by simply “Googling” a person’s name.

parents post photos on these sites that include foster children. Photographs of foster children even if there is no text that indicates who the child is or their name are still considered “information” about a child and therefore not appropriate as per WAC 388. It is assumed that your close friends and family members will be aware you are a licensed foster home and they may even know the children who are currently placed with you. These sites are not considered a “secure” means of communicating even if the information can only be viewed by those you approve to have access to your specific page.

These sites (such as Facebook and My Space) are not considered “secure” means of communicating...

Foster care licensing staff decided the start of a new year was a good opportunity to provide some clarification and remind all foster families that safeguarding the confidentiality of the foster children in your homes must remain a paramount issue for you to keep foremost in your thoughts. Here’s a “quick refresher” on confidentiality!

With many of the popular social networking sites on the Internet such as Facebook and My Space, DLR has become aware of potential confidentiality issues when foster

If you have posted any information about a foster child on one of these sites, we ask that you remove this information right away and take necessary measures in the future to ensure that this information remains confidential. You can also contact your DLR licensor and/or child’s social worker to discuss any other questions you may have regarding confidentiality. See pg. 6 for more information on this WAC.

News from the Doc

Submitted by Dr. Don Ashley

One of the most powerful ways to prevent illness is immunization.

The CDC reports that immunization supplies for seasonal flu are limited. If anyone in your home has not been immunized, get that immunization now if it has not already run out in your community.

The H1N1 epidemic seems to be temporarily decreasing. Doctors are still shaking their heads as to why some people did so well and others who should have done well got so sick. There is a high chance the disease will come back next spring. Anyone who has not already been immunized should get immunized now. That way they will already have high immunity if the disease comes back next spring. Children nine years and younger need a booster. The booster dose can be given any time after four weeks after the first dose.

And yes, it looks like washing the hands and covering the cough made a big difference. Continue washing your hands and covering your cough!

Imminent Risk and Initial Placement FTDMs

Submitted by David Needham

Family Team Decision Meetings (FTDMs) are held whenever placement decisions for children need to be made. For example: when a child is at imminent risk of being placed into care; is placed into care on an emergency basis; when a change of placement is about to occur; or when we are looking at reunification. The purpose of holding an FTDM is to encourage and increase family involvement in placement decisions that affect their children and to involve a broad representation of individuals to share in the decision making process. Teams work together to address the safety concerns and to create a network of support for the child and the adults who care for the child. The goal is to develop a plan that will provide the safest and least restrictive placement for children while preventing unnecessary moves and encouraging continued family involvement.

When a child is assessed to be at high risk for abuse/neglect or within 24-72 hours of an emergency placement/removal, an FTDM is called. The purpose of the FTDM in this situation is to decide if: the agency must file for dependency and request out of home placement by the court; the child can remain in the family home with a safety/service plan in place; or, the child should be voluntarily placed by parent(s) into care.

During the course of the meeting, we discuss all possible placement options. If it is determined that child safety can not be ensured in the parent's care, or if more time is needed to re-search relative placement options, or if there are no relatives available, then a foster home placement will be needed. You, as the potential caregiver, may be called to participate if it is believed that the child will need out of home placement. If you are invited to participate, please come as this is a great opportunity for you to learn valuable information about the child and the family.

Because the term "foster care" or "foster home" can have a negative connotation for some families – be prepared to share the strengths of your home, family makeup, and that your focus is to ensure safety and that the needs of the children are met. In addition, here are just a few other ideas to help you prepare for the meeting. Be open to ideas, suggestions and be willing to try new things to support the child, parents and your family. Come to the FTDM prepared to share concerns, needs, ideas and questions. Finally, know that through participation of all those involved and by gathering as much information as possible, our goals of preventing unnecessary moves, ensuring safety and reducing trauma to the child increases dramatically!

Sometimes birth parents are not accepting of foster parents initially, but over time grow to accept and appreciate the care that you provide for their children. In addition, by developing a positive working relationship with the birth parents you may be considered a resource for the child in the future (unfortunately, this may not be an option in some situations). By working collaboratively as a team for the child and family -- our goals to support, ensure safety, reduce grief and loss for the child, and reduce trauma to the child can be accomplished.

Thank you for the love and care that you provide for the child in your care. You, as the caregiver, play such an important role in the life of a child. Whether you are caring for a child a short amount of time or will be a child's long term placement, the impact you make on that child will create a long lasting impression and could potentially change their lives forever. Thank you for giving of yourself and serving the children in your care.

Family Team Decision Meetings (FTDMs) are held whenever placement decisions for children need to be made.
